AVENUE THRONG IN REVERENT HUSH AS CORTEGE PASSES

Father Chidwick Recalls Horrors of Explosion in Address.

(Continued from First Page.) day as we stand over the remains of our dead, we thank God for the power which calmed the sea and held in check rash and unwarranted accusation. We thank God for the strength which made passion wait upon investigation, and give time for the prevalence of wiser and truer counsel. "An Altar of Sacrifice."

"We thank God that at the door of the nation with which we are now at peace we did not unjustly lay the crime which had been committed in waters under her protection. We thank God that we were able to take a higher and holler stand for compliance with our demands; that we did not send our soldiers forth only with vengeance in their hearts. We thank God that with clean hands we can lift up these bodies to God and beseech his mercy upon their souls. The ship was truly an altar of sacrifice, the men were truly a holocaust, but the glory which they throw upon the flag might have borne a stain and a defilement through heated passion of those who would avenge their deaths, but now the glory has no stain, no defilement, is pure, unsullied, true, and imperishable.

few minutes more and you will bear away these precious bodies to that bivouac of the dead which our country reserves for those who die martyrs to her sacred cause You will lawm them side by side with the bodies of those who were their companions in life that they may be their companions in death, The sod of our patity land will inclose The sod of our native land will inclose them and kind hearts and gentle hands of their own will care for them. The slient company about them will be of the same noble shroud as themselves." After a tribute to the Maine itself, Father Chadwick, turning to the body-bearers, comrades-in-arms of the dead,

The last remains of her crew are now before us. You receive them in the name of the nation as heroes who have added luster to our country's honor. Never has this beautiful city of our nation's Capital witnessed a more im-

Tribute Nationwide.

"But it is not only here that this honor is paid. There is not a city, town, or village in this broad land, but at this moment turns toward this demonstration and in sympathy this demonstration and in sympathy bows head and heart in prayer.

"And it is well that this honor should be accorded the memory of our men. They went to their post of duty aware of its danger, but glad to serve their flag. They were prepared for any action which might be required of them. And, although they were stricken in their sleep and had not a chance to pull the lockstring of even one of their guns, they died in the interests of their people, at

of even one of their guns, they died in the interests of their people, at the post of duty to which the people called them, and they deserve all the glory which you have given them, all that you give to those who die in the shock and shriek of battle."

Thousands of Washington people unable to attend the memorial service this afternoon did reverence to the dead when the caissons were being drawn from the Navy Yard to the State, War, and Navy building, Thousands of hats were lifted as the procession came up Pennsylvania avenue, the battalion of Marines from the Marine Barracks neting as a guard

Passes the Treasury.

Reaching the Intersection of the Avenue and Fiftzenth street the column wheeled around the Treasury building, past the south front of the White House and drew up in front of the State, War and Navy building. At and the caskets which they guarded were standing a few hundred people in an inclosed space immediately in front of the building and reaching up onto the steps. Across the street on the White Lot were thousands and thousands of citizens, men. women, and children who had come to testify by personal presence of the reverence by personal presence of the reverence they felt for the dead.

The caisson drivege drew up alongside one another in five groups of six, with one group of four. On one side of them the Marine battalion ranged itself. The sailors were massed at the other. The other military detachments stood close at hand. Various branches of the service all in dress uniform were now at hand.

Engineer Battalion Arrives.

The First Engineer Battalion from the Engineer Barracks, Major William D. Conner, commanding, had swung into place a few minutes before the calssons arrived. This battalion had left the barracks at 1 c'clock, and marching to the Speedway had come thence via. Seventeenth street to the White House. The four troops of the Fif-teenth Cavalry from Fort Myer had ridden over also before the marines, the bluejackets, and their sacred charge arrived from the Navy Yard, and had been assigned to their place surrounding the caskets.

The Marines marched under the command of Major H. E. Davis. The four companies were under command, respectively, of Capts, L. M. Gulick, F. M. Bradman, W. W. Low, and Lieut, G. M. Kinkald. The officers were to special full dress uniform, the men in dress uniform with coats of dark blue, red stripes on trougers, and orange. stripes on trousers, and orange

Major Conner's Command.

Under Major Conner commanding the Engineers were Capts, C. W. Otwell, H. Witmore, J. F. Bell, and A. H. Acher. Those knowing the Engineer uniform recognized the red stripe with the white edging and the gold tassels on the collar, distinctive of this branch of the army.

The four troops of the Fitteenth Cavalry under command of Major Foltz were in charge respectively of Capts A. R. Lindsey and H. C. Smither, and Lieuts. Charles Bradford and W. W. Overton. When the cortege starts to-ward Arlington. Troop A, under Cap-tain Lindsey, will act as the Fresident's guard of honor.

The caskets were removed at noon from the deck of the cruiser Ehrmingman and placed on the army caissons, third-four in number. A large number of persons were at the Navy Yard to see the removal of the caskets from ship to caissons and to witness the start of the procession to the State Way and of the procession to the State, War and Navy building.

Although the conveyance of the cas-kets from the yard to the State, War, and Navy building was not deemed a ### ceremonial nor a funeral procession, in the strict sense of the words, yet the solemn and sacred nature of the calssons'

burden caused the ordering of the bluejackets of the North Carolina and Birmingham to accompany the caskets to the scene of the memorial service. Besides the sailor comrades of the dead, an escort of mounted police and a battalion of marines, all under com-mand of Commander Hughes, of the Birmingham, marched beside the cais-

In the funeral cortege from the State, War, and Navy building to Arlington, veterans of the Spanish War will play a prominent part. Their formation will be as follows:
